Growing Unrest In China

Authorities Taking Drastic Action

Hongkong, Nov. 24. The Chinese Communists are resorting to drastic measures to suppress growing unrest and regain popular support, according to reports here.

Peking Radio announced the' execution of 17 persons in Shanghai and five in Peking elias well as the imprisonment of 145 more on charges of sabotage, espionage and organising an anti-Red guerilla force, radio also disclosed anti-Red sentiment was spreading into police force. Two of shot were Shanghai officers found guilty of harbouring saboteurs.

At the same time, the Reds, | in an effort to regain waning popular support, announced the landlord debts owed by ap- Seven-Point proximately 20,000,000 farmers. In advances of up to eight miles on the northwest front, the onrushing columns had not yet run into the new defence line believed thrown up by 100,000 Chinese and Red Koreans in the snow-clad hills.

The Allies had 100,000 men on the northwest front for the drive that is pressing the enemy back toward the border. Fewer than half the United Nations troops were in action. The rest were in reserve ready to exploit any breakthrough.

Shaw's Will Expected To Be A Wasterpiece

London, Nov. 24. George Bernard Shaw's 8,000-word will, when published in full, is almost certain to be considered a literary masterpiece.

It may be months before it is revealed, because the public trustees are faced with taxation problems on the playwright's arge fortune.

The first of the two clauses published yesterday sald:

"I desire that my dead body shall be cremated and its ashes inseparably mixed with those of my late wife, now in the custody of the Golders' Green Crematorium, and in this condition .........scattered in the garden of the house in Ayot St Lawrence where we lived together for 35 years, unless some other disposal of them should be, in the opinion of my trustee, more

Dramatic Stroke MacArthur's get before the winter really sets in. THERE has been nothing more dramatic connected with the Korea conflict than General Mac-Arthur's announcement that he has involving 100,000 United Nations troops, for the express purpose of "bringing the war to an end." The action, especially if it be successful, leaves stone cold so many previous arguments as to how the United Nations was going to deal with Chinese Communist intervention in Korea. MacArthur has taken the soldier's attitude, to which, of course, he is fully entitled as commander-inchief of UN forces in Korea, but whether it dovetails with the politicians' and diplomats' viewpoints is, at first sight, problematical. General Mac-Arthur, who has always carefully calculated his military campaigns strikes a completely confident note in his first communique. He clearly believes that this time he and his forces can really bring the war to an end by a masterstroke of strategy and tactics. His. confidence is boosted by the knowledge that he has absolute air superiority and in consequence is able to deny the enemy reinforcement of men, weapons and supplies. And it is well to remember that this was one decisive factor in the astonishing UN offensive which MacArthur mounted from Inchon to drive the North Koreans far across the 88th parallel. Quick and outright success in this latest assault, however. is even more important than in the Inchon campaign. For this time the

Nevertheless, the most imponderable to offer resistance to this latest drive. have a similar appreciation. There is another consideration which offers hope for a rapid liquidation of the war in Korea. It is that the Chinese Com-Nations intends fully to respect of the world, and that, as a result, the Peking government will instruct its "volunteers" in Korea to return home. as quickly as possible. Such a decision The next 48 hours should provide the weather; they must achieve their ter- answer.

factor is the willingness or otherwise of the Chinese and Korean Communists Initial gains must not be taken as irrefutable evidence that the enemy will retreat helter skelter across the Manchurian border or meekly surrender themselves in divisional strength. The Communists may still consider that the Yalu River reservoirs and hydroelectric power plants are worth fighting for and will, when their lines have been sufficiently shortened, make a determined attempt to defeat the UN offensive. General MacArthur's appreciation of the situation is that the enemy cannot offer effective opposition because his supply routes can be made untenable by UN air attacks, and he evidently considers the Communists munists, in addition to recognising a very difficult, possibly hopeless military situation in North Korea, are prepared to accept the assurances of Britain and America that the United China's special interests in that part would be sensible and becoming and would make relatively easy a satisfactory settlement of the Korea problem.

"SNOWDRIFT"-This is the original "New Look" shown by Riche at the 3rd Annual Congress of the Haute Colffure Francaise in Paris, where it was socialmed as the most outstanding contribution to hairdressing styles for 1951. From "Snowdrift" Riche has derived many variations of the "New Lock" and whilst this version can be worn in contrasting or naturalcoloured hatri it is demonstrated here in a contrasting colour to show how it is attached.

Twice a year representatives from 18 nations assemble in Paris to decide a vital point - the length of your hair. At the last conference, it was unanimously decided that hair remains short-but not masculine. It should not exceed 1" to 11/2" at the nape of the neck. The Urchin Cut has finally come to the end of an unexpectedly long ran.

For a narrow face, the hair is drawn forward and waved down to soft curls at the nape of the neck. Irene Dunne had her hair dressed in this way for the recent Command Performance. There is a tailored look about the new styles, or, as Riche calls it, a "tendency towards hauteur." Another style showed the hair drawn tightly away from the face, with a slanting parting across the back, rather like a seam. The more sophisticated woman will prefer slightly longer hair colourings. We have seen lately blue and pink curls for evening and hair lacquered into exotic shades for great occasions, but there is:a tendency towards more normal hues this season. Riche showed:

BLACK TULIP—a rich bruncite with PEWTER SILVER—a softer silver grey than MORNING HAZE—soft brown with a silver

HAVANA—deep glowing red. SMOKE BLONDE—slightly deeper than ash-blonde, but with no brassiness,

These colours can be obtained by temporary rinses, which wash off, or by a more permanent method, which successfully disguises grey hairs.

For grand evenings, Riche produces "Trans-formettes" designed in velvet, beads, fur, jewellery- and-hair, made to transform any of his three basic day-time styles.

The New Look itself is a sweep of pale silver-blue hair curling round the ear and clipped with a curl at the side-back. This lock was acclaimed as the most outstanding contribution to hairdressing styles for 1951, and there are many variations on it. Illustrated is the one known as "Snowdrift"-but it must be emphasised that this version can be worn in natural-coloured hair also, adding width and grace to the hair, without being too conspicuous.

"You will find developing before long," said Riche, "a feeling for height. It is extraordinary how it grows upon you!" This last remark seems unfortunate; the opposite is the object of the Transformettes.

The Dior coil, or bun, on top was surrounded by a chain of golden flowers. This little device weighs only 1 oz. and although the same effect can be achieved with a false plait or switch, there is a considerable difference in weight. A switch would weigh about 4 ounces.

The "Medici" transformettes can be worn in many different ways. Illustrated is one composed of bubbles of black and white. They are self attaching, and can be adjusted and removed in a few seconds. The line along the forehead, and curling over the ears, is strongly reminiscent of the headdress worm by Mary, Queen or Scots, and the period feeling was enhanced by a transformette in Venetian scarlet plaited velvet, ontwined with pearls. Crystal and jet, and glass beads, were used for others.

If liked, they can be worn round the other way, so that the ornament forms a line along the back of the hair, and the ends curl up above the cars. It is equally attractive if placed on the hair sideways, so that there is an asymmetric

A mother of pearl trident crown was called "Neptune," and "Pearl Spring" was the name given to a corkscrew of small pearls strung on fine wire, which clipped neatly to the sides of

For really untidy growing ends, Riche provided a gleaming glass head lattice cage which

There have been great advances in hair caught up the back hair and provided a sparkling ornament for evening. "And this," he said proudly, "illustrates how a day colffure can become very attractive, very practical; and very, very expensive!" The object of his pride, not to be taken too seriously, was a pale grey mink with jewelled eyes, and long white stiffened whiskers, which made a stortling hair ornament NOT; as he emphasised, a hat. If liked, the mink's head could nestle in the curls at the back, while its tail curled round one car. To match, the model were a grey mutation mink cape incket, with sequin shoulders and scalloped edges, also designed by · Prettiest ornament—and most impractical of all—was a tiny crystal Christmas tree entitled Miss Noel, complete even to tiny candles.

At a cocktail party held afterwards - the cocktail bar was somewhat incongruously placed in front of the elaborate pale green hair-washing basins—we privately asked the model with the Dior coll how she liked wearing it. She admit-ted that it took a lot of getting used to, but at any rate, she added, you hardly know it's

Swallowing Food In The Wrong Way

ONE of the most frequent accidents involving children is that of swallowing "the wrong way" and thereby getting food into the windpipe or lungs, a situation which may, at times, cause scrious illness or even

Parents can do much to prevent these disasters simply by refraining from youngsters foods that are hard to chew. Children under five can handle most soft foods well, but they still have to learn to chew hard toods such as peanuts, corn; popcorn, and raw fruits and vegetables, such as apples and turnips. Until they do, all such things should be kept from

A recent study in America showed that peanuts were responsible for the difficulty in four out of five instances, with the other foods mentioned above occounting for the other cases.

A Tendency Of course, children also have A tendency to put almost any hard object into the mouth. Bits: of bone, pleces of rubber, orange peel, and metal 'objects have all been found in the lungs. Nuts and hard vegetables, however, are the most dangerous since they often break into small bits during the attempt to remove them. Fortunately, many objects can be removed from the lungs with bronchoscope, a long tube with a light that can be passed into the lungs through the windpipe. This is not a simple procedure and when the foreign body is one which breaks into ever smaller and smaller pieces, it may be almost impossible to get

T is impossible to refrain from applause at the conclusion, with this fifth volume, of so grandiose a project as the Sitwell autobiography—or from the suspicion that it might, with advantage, have been shorter by one volume.

Osbert Sitwell speaks of the "design" as if no departure from it was possible. In fact, the "design" was originally by . . . GEORGE for a four-volume book.

No harm at all if a writer finds he has more to say than he had expected. But Noble Essences has a different character from its liantly coloured as a tropical four predecessors and only bird." with some effort elbows its way into their company,

Now and again some minor poet of the twenties is the Byzantine or Sienese profile, dragged out from under the the hooded, tragic eyes. Listen where those Wicked to this snatch of conversation: Uncles the years have buried him, so that he may be chivvied.

Of Sir George Sitwell, the author's father-victim, we are, alas, afforded only a fleeting glimpse. But how characteristic! cannot be of long duration. Having evicted some pensants from his Italian palace, Sir verell is hot-tempered: "I never George typically misunderstands their sullen look: "You see does something to annoy me." always make myself issued in popular when I want to!"

This is not to say, however, that the public is denied a fresh inspection of the Sitwell family treasures. Far from it. As if he has edited, it is through sheer nervoumess that Sacheverell he were the owner-turnedcurator of a property handed over to the National Trust, the author points out to the conparty ducted Sacheverell at a time when. although an officer in the Grenadier Guards, he united "something of the Gothic saint, and there is big money to be St Sebastian perhaps with something of the young Bacchus," and rubber, and panning for Note the "untidy grace," which the sergeant-major has over-

YOUR BIRTHDAY .....

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25

IF you are born today, your intuitive powers are exceptional. Make use of this gift, for you are almost psychic in knowing when and how to act. It also helps you to understand people and their motivations. This is one of the basic elements of leadership.

You have a real and deep desire to help those who are less fortunate than yourself.
You will activate this feeling by community and church activities as well as in personal aid and assistance to those who need your help. You have a "healing hand" and would probably make an excellent physician or nurse. You have commendable presence of mind in any emergency and can be depended upon to make a right decision—on the spur of the moment if necessary. This makes you indispensible in any crisis. Although you are high spirited and even quick tempered, at times, you would never wilfully injure anyone in anger, Once you have "let off steam," you cool off quickly.

You have good emotional control-sometimes too much. Although you are basically affec-tionate and demonstrative with those you love, you suppress this as a rule and appear cool and even distant to very close friends. Wed someone who understands this characteristic or unhappiness can result.

OPENING MATCHES TODAY PENTANGULAR TOURNAMENT

Extensive daily watering and a mid-week drizzle have whetted the appetites of all intending spectators of the opening Pentangular Rugby Tournament match between the Club and the Navy.

Based purely on the merits of their display last week, the Navy are at long last out of the rut, not since the mid-thirties, when they reigned supreme, have the Senior Service been able to field such a star studded fifteen as will line up on Saturday at 4.15 on the Club ground.

With the Commandos no longer in evidence, this revival is indeed a stimulus to local rugger, over which the Club and Army have held sway for four seasons. The Club, holders for three years, cannot be any too happy about the outcome of today's struggle.

The FA, as I have told you are proposing to cut out the million-to-one-against and to streamline their Cup competitions in this way: they will set a pace for us.
